

Refugee crisis due to Energetic climate change

Just like the climate changes over decades and centuries and weather changes more rapidly so does the envelope of energy covering our planet. If we look at past millenia we find that the sun is the main factor, but there have been large, mainly localized, disruptions caused by meteorites and volcano's as well. Similarly we find that the coming and going of different spirits incarnating on our planet and their form of religion and spiritual development have had a great impact on local energies.

Although for many people this global energy field seems as unpredicable as the weather it is more easily influenced by the actions of incarnated humanity. A well known Hermetic esoteric law is: 'As it is above, so it is below. As it is inside, so it is outside.'. The physical world outside of us is thus a manifestation of both our inner state and the energetic envelope spanning our planet. The energy field is in turn influenced by our inner state and what we manifest in the world. It seems to be a circular system in which the same energy is amplifying and perpetuating itself, but as we know human nature changes but slowly, but our history can just like the weather be extremely volatile. Lets look at an example to clarify.

In the 19th century people in North America and Europe commonly believed in benevolent spirits and held seances to contact them and learn about the cosmos from them. It was an age where a high level of spiritual knowledge and inspiration was relatively common. It was also an age in which people believed that by improving oneself morally one would naturally be more succesful in all endeavours. Then two unspeakable horrors manifested themselves namely the 'Great War' and World War II in which there was unprecedented mass suffering. Instead of creating art, we created suffering, instead of feeling hope, we started feeling fear and despair, instead of believing morality would ensure success, we started to believe in power, deception and cunning. You can imagine that the benevolent spirits of the late 19th century no longer felt drawn to us, but a new breed emerged and has helped us perpetuate our inner and outer state ever since.

Just like external events such as the wars can create a shift, so can events in the energy field manifest themselves in people and our environment. Unfortunately this process is often misunderstood and under utilized. Let us look at the recent 2012 craze for instance. For some unfathomable reason most people in North America and Europe decided to believe in a North American protestant myth of a higher power intervening directly in the physical realm and putting everything right. This is an extremely harmful belief since it undermines our understanding of the esoteric law I mentioned earlier and puts us in a slave or object position which can only be worked upon by its master. It denies our own power and responsibility. Somehow this 'saviour' myth has managed to corrupt the western conceptions of Buddhism, Native American tradition as well as Mayan religion. Since I knew this to be false, I started looking for the truth of what was going to occur.

I was immensely saddened and disappointed that when I consulted with the spirits of the Mayan elders in September 2012 that I was only the 6th person over the past 20 years to have bothered to find out from them what their calendar was really about and what was going to occur. They too were quite dismayed at the lack of preparation of humanity thus limiting the beneficial effects and even inducing harmful effects from the increased exchange of spirit travel between our solar system and others.

They had envisioned that people would be working towards as high as possible personal states so as to attract the highest spirits from other civilizations to join us here on our planet. That these spirits, when incarnated, would be recognized and welcomed as honoured guests and given the support needed to bring their blessings to our world. Instead people largely worried about the economy, ignored these spirits or huddled in fear and have started to attract similarly primitive and unhealthy beings to our planet. We have recently even started disrupting the spirits of the upper air, which were very valued allies to humanity in the 19th century. These spirits are instrumental in bringing blessings from other civilizations to our planet and guiding extra-terrestrial spirits to and in human bodies.

It is therefore not strange to me to find these energetic events mirrored in a refugee crisis overwhelming Europe and terrorists and criminals becoming more actively present in our society. Their suffering is a mirror image of what our spiritual benefactors are going through. Syria is home to one of the oldest civilizations on our planet and instead of trying to learn from them how different civilizations and traditions can blend and be built on top of each other we shun contact with them. We make them leave their homeland, but then refuse to let them in.

The destruction of Bagdad and looting of its cultural treasures and the attempt to do the same to Damascus under the guise of 'protecting the people' are preventing these locations from becoming homes to new impulses. It is not enough that the USA and its allies would stop training rebels and sending weapons and ammunition for thousands into Syria and other locations of significance. If the energetic envelope which is causing this manifestation of itself is not changed their suffering will in some other way be reflected upon the earth. We should welcome our guests and help them share their blessings with us. To end such suffering can only be done by working on both the spiritual as well as the physical level in unison.

So what does that mean exactly? What can we do? Help to form healthy incarnations for our guests by banning animal cruelty in the meat industry and to stop poisoning our children with harmful medication, food additives, educational systems and pesticides. Help them in spreading their message by giving them the means to do so. Support art and expression instead of trying to turn every member of the population into a human resource which has to generate profit. The purpose of the human experience is to be curious and thus grow, all other elements of life should serve to support this purpose.

Another possibility is to create antennae to catch impulses from other solar systems. Stonehenge and the Great Pyramid of Gizeh are examples of such constructions. For these constructions to be able to work well however the blockade of the upper air would have to be removed. So how and why is the upper air disrupted since 2011 to such a degree that communication and travel has become restricted? It is my belief that some people are aware of the influx of extra-terrestrial beings and seek to maintain their own majority influence over this planet rather than releasing it. Either they have forgotten that they themselves came to our world after ravaging their own or believe that they have always been here. Some may believe that this world is their property or they have become overly attached and become unable to shed their human form. Regardless of their reasons, the effect they are having is that this planet is turning from a mixed culture into a sterile mono-culture.

This energetic change is reflected in the material world as racism, religious extremism and nationalism. We as spiritual beings are suffering from mass stress atavism reducing us to xenophobic animals governed by half-conscious body preservation instincts rather than our spirits. The people seeking to preserve us from alien influences do not seem to realize that the very traditions they seek to keep alive were shaped by the very processes they are seeking to stop and that by halting this process they will create a world which is only material and no longer spiritual. The form of the blockade is that a few hundred meters above the surface the energetic envelope is criss-crossed by harmful artificial energies which disrupt the ether bodies of spirits. If we wish this disruption to cease we need to stop manifesting this barrier in our hearts and minds as well as in the material world in the form of walls and fences both those of concrete and iron and those of paper.

2015.12.12
Star Hawk Dreamer