

Spiritual perspective on New Year 2016 eve's assaults in Cologne and other cities

What happened?

There are plenty of recriminations going around blaming both the perpetrators as well as the authorities for failing to provide order and safety. This is being treated as a simple crime multiplied by a hundred, but unfortunately it is not.

It is true that it takes far less courage to commit any crime, including sexual assault, in a group rather than alone. There are indeed social dynamics at work which make groups more dangerous by causing their individual members to behave in ways they would not dare to do when alone. But this is not some random chance event of some people seizing an opportunity or daring each other into transgressive behaviour. This is a pre-meditated event as is evidenced by it being carried out simultaneously in several places in Germany and Austria. Blame the head, not only the hand.

I know that now some of you readers will stop reading and throw me in a big bin of conspiracy theory advocates. That is fine. But rather than most of those kind I am not interested in elaborate, unprovable theories and making much of coincidences. I am interested in helping people not just understand, but also in trying to give them a grip on what is happening. The only 'proof' I can offer is my energetic perception, which can and should be verified by your own sensations or that of reliable people with energetic sensitivity.

My view is that the same powers responsible for the civil war in the Ukraine have been at work in Cologne as well. The end goal is not the theft of mobile phones or sexual thrills, but rather control over European society. There is a continuous social, political and spiritual struggle between powers advocating freedom and opportunity versus those preferring a system of top-down control. The genius of the current event is that by responding to it the actors are invited to rip out their own hearts. To give up their germanic belief in strength through community support and freedom and trade it for a system of authoritarian repression. The very act of trying to fight these attacks, will speed their demise and turn them into what we are resisting.

So if it is an attack on European society who is doing it? Who is a part of it?

Who did it?

-The victims are just that, innocent, traumatized victims. They are not inciting anything.

Often reports of attacks are faked or exaggerated for propaganda purposes, but in this case the aura of the women shows that the events they are talking about were experienced also in the emotional layer of their aura and their aura's are deformed and in a state of shock.

Compare the aura state of the women with that of Colin Powell in his WMD speech at the UN. You will note that there often during his speech a strong discrepancy between the layers of the aura and, bless him, a struggle as his moral structures in his throat and crown chakra are rebelling against his own behaviour.

-The police was not merely caught of guard. They were hampered by members of their own corps who belief that their course of action, while costly to some, will save many more by changes in laws granting them more power.

If we look at the inspirational impulses received by the Cologne chief of police you will note the strong influences of the Ahrimanic cosmos on him.

So we find ourselves in a situation where the very people who should be protecting society are in effect a fifth column attacking the system from within to transform it to something they believe is better. Ultimately a fascist rather than democratic attitude, no matter how well meant.

-The anti-immigrant and anti-islamic movement leaders are spearheading the change of society. It is my belief they are not merely using the situation, but were aware of it before it occurred and prepared to utilize the opportunity as soon as it materializes. Without their being positioned to create a shift in society, such an event would have limited impact. They are empowering such attacks on our freedom. It is my belief this situation is very similar to the Dutch and US media immediately blaming the crash of MH-17 on the Russians without any facts while the governments are both laying the blame and delaying or hindering any actual fact finding. This follows the successful pattern of many false media reports on Iraqi cruelty and transgressions during both Iraq-US wars.

By eliciting a strong media and thereby public response both society as well as politicians are pressured to change. For optimal effect this should be done while the public and its leadership is still in a state of shock not knowing how to respond. By correct timing the pressure group will make the decision for them and by simply not responding or opposing the pressure group, which in the light of the recent events is an unpopular move, the group will come closer to its goals.

In Germany this is offset somewhat by opposing pressure groups advocating tolerance, but the clash between these idealistic opposites can by itself also create the problem of dividing the people and pushing both sides into extremism.

I believe that most of the pressure group's supporters do not realize they are not defending Germany or European values, but are contributing to tensions which will transform Germany and Europe into a police state in which their vaunted freedom which they seek to protect will have all but vanished.

-The assailants

I believe to be mainly low-level henchmen led by a few infiltrated agitators. This pattern has been used in the student riots in Iran, in the violent riots in the Ukraine, the public unrest in Syria and now in Germany. There need to be enough violent, dissatisfied people to recruit, but a few events, such as the burning of a shelter for asylum seekers, will assure enough recruits. Then their power needs to be enhanced and released at the place and time it will have a maximum effect. From their apparent behaviour and appearance it is hard to discover who might be fueling these events as ring leaders and who are merely participating. How can we tell there even are ring leaders?

If we observe the astral sheath of our planet prior to the time and various locations of these attacks we can detect a strong influx of energy being sent there from the Caucasus, New England and Washington DC which shortly after these events shifts its focus point to Berlin and London. This is a pattern of energy similar to the Ukrainian situation shortly after the MH-17 crash. First a focus from the same sources on the location of the disturbance, then a focus on the power centers to be affected which in the Ukrainian situation were the EU parliament, Washington DC and NATO headquarters.

While emotion, such as that of hundreds of traumatized women or airline passengers, generates an enormous amount of power even more power and of a different kind can be gained by death in the controlled regions. For those of you who practice channeling you will find that the experiences of the MH-17 passengers was for many of them very different from a normal violent death as their energy was harvested. It is fortunate that due to unexpected resistance in many cities events did not yet escalate to that point, but we can expect the people who seek to effect this change to attempt this harvesting to continue their plans.

What to do now?

So what to do when such events happen? It is always more difficult if you cannot seize the initiative and are forced to take the punches. It is important to stop both the efforts to wrest control over the people from the people and the attempts of your enemies to strengthen themselves.

-Find a way as free people to prevent such events. In this case promote chivalric values so any lady can count on many gallant knights coming to their rescue and educate women on how to protect themselves. Do not delegate away all power and responsibility for creating a safe society, but accept your own duty and influence as a member of that society.

-Minimize damage. Through the modern media an event will not only impact those directly affected, but also every one indirectly exposed to what happened. Just like one can choose to eat organic fruit rather than fruit sprayed with toxic pesticides choose your media and social environment wisely. Do not allow their influence to overwhelm you. Remember that your own spirit should be the architect of your being, development and actions, not your environment nor your fear bloated ego.

-Heal the wounds. Such events leave scars on both the energetic environment as well as on the people involved. Help them heal. Provide well blessed and protected places for the victims to recover also for those who perished.

-Disarm your enemy. Like most modern armies their forces are mainly made up out of conscripts rather than volunteers. Offer those supporters of your enemy better options. Ultimately it is a choice between the desire to transform or to enhance influence. If the energy is turned inward growth will eventually lead to a desire for freedom and self determination, if the energy is turned outward it will tend to lower it's vibration to displace other people's energies leading to a negative spiral.

-Turn the tables. It is difficult to attack and defend at the same time, but the same goes for your enemy. Make sure that when the crisis has passed you push forward your own ideals. We as a people choose freedom. We must make our society and governments reflect this democratic choice. We have to protect our collective energy body against diseases, parasites and predators. This can mean remedial treatments, banishment and isolationism. But most of all it requires us to accept our democratic responsibility to do what we can.

Even though the battle between spirit and ego, light and dark, order and chaos may be eternal because neither can exist without it's opposite this struggle is far from pointless. This very struggle shapes us both individually as well as collectively. By actively participating we are emancipating ourselves and becoming free and strong so we may one day become a true democracy rather a herd. It is a tough struggle to break free from the herd, but it is our collective journey in which we may only succeed through supporting freedom, equality, brotherhood and compassion.

We need to find a balance between our duty to elevate others and our need to stabilize ourselves. A repressive immigration policy will do neither.
